

Erika Robers, Community & Natural Resources Planner, Groundwork Studio, erika@groundworkstudio.com

Erika Robers is a Community and Natural Resources Planner at Groundwork Studio in Albuquerque, NM. She has a background in education, community-based research, and program development. Her love for the outdoors, plants and nature-based education led her to pursue a degree in community, environmental and natural resource planning. Erika's leadership in outdoor student learning events and her time organizing and teaching immigrants informs her community outreach practice. She loves the possibilities for community innovation and resilience embodied in green infrastructure planning and seeks to support the creative community work that Groundwork Studio is involved in. Erika brings an equity lens to her community planning work and focuses on relationship building as the key to solid planning. She is an avid reader, gardener, and camper who loves exploring New Mexico with family and friends.

Erika is presenting the following:

(1) Building Fences or Housing: Planners' Responsibility to Include the Unhoused in Public Planning

Wednesday, October 26, 8:30 – 9:30 am 101A

(2) Interactive Mapping and Engagement for Green Stormwater Infrastructure

Friday, October 28, 10:30 – 11:30 am
102B